

“Scheduled feedings may not be supportive of infants’ physiological needs, sometimes setting unrealistic expectations for feeding timing (both frequency and duration) and feeding volumes. Demand or self-regulatory feeding provides the infant with opportunities to demonstrate hunger cues and alertness behavior appropriately before the nipple feeding.”

McGrath & Braescu (2004)